WHERE IT'S AT — The latest Style & Jewellery news by Mary Sanderson

THE EMERALD EDIT

The emerald is a mysterious beast, many believe it is unlucky, while others are infatuated by its rather delicious green-hue. Since their discovery over 5,000 years ago, emeralds have acquired a glittering line-up of collectors that includes; Cleopatra, Catherine the Great, Indian Maharajahs and jewellery's most famous screen goddess Elizabeth Taylor; whose Bulgari Emerald Pendant brooch sold for a record-breaking $6.5 million at Christie's in 2011. But, did you know that emeralds are twenty times rarer than their white diamond friends? A fact worth remembering when your fiancé is bedazzled by white diamonds when a juicy emerald stone might look just as spectacular on your left hand? ( Email the consultancy team and we will direct them if you're still hankering after the white diamond*).

This season's collections have seen emeralds dazzle in every form; perfectly crafted into statement earrings, bejewelled watches, knock-out rings and as dainty studs at the house of Dior. At Gemfields (the world's leading supplier of responsibly sourced gemstones) the group recently discovered a vast 5,655-carat emerald crystal at its Kagem mine in the copper-belt region of Northern Zambia. This magnificent stone was aptly named the 'Lion Emerald' (the honour of a stone being named is only given to the rarest and most remarkable of stones), so yes, this is an exceptional beast.

With emeralds stealing the limelight, here's our pick of the best; starting with the ethical jewellery brand AYA's twinkling ear climbers, which are sure to make every girl an emerald devotee.

METAL MEADOW

It's about time the British Royal Collection featured fine pieces of jewellery to bring you the best in 18K gold designs. My favourite being the Fabergé Secret Garden ring with its vibrant palette of brilliant-cut emeralds and sapphires and rich, dimensional reds for the petals. Each piece is made to order, but customers can choose to match their own selection of each design by altering the colour of the natural gemstones or replacing with lab-grown stones. With Customers' Guide books, brochures for preview and design photos or social media, you'll be able to get the best of both worlds.

REVEALED: Why are coloured gemstones on the rise and what are consumers looking for?

◇ DIAMONDS & GEMSTONES / IN DEPTH / NEWS by STACEY HAILES on 17TH JUNE 2019

Words by Sophia King as reported in the Knight Frank Luxury Investment Index 2019.

Earlier this year, I had the pleasure of attending a breakfast hosted by Gemfields, the world-leading supplier of responsibly sourced coloured gemstones.

The event proved memorable, thanks not only to insightful presentations from CEO Sean Gilbertson and independent fine jewellery specialist Joanna Hardy, but to a remarkable array of uncut emeralds and rubies on display. Sparkling in the light, the gems gave a tantalising glimpse into the beautiful pieces of jewellery they're destined to become. I left the event fantasising about ornate ruby rings and emerald pendant necklaces.

It's not just me in awe of these precious gemstones. The appreciation of coloured gemstones dates back centuries, if not millennia, when they were worn for their talismanic properties and believed to be gifts from the gods. Roman emperors and empresses would wear them to cement their status, power and wealth. But the discovery of diamond mines in South Africa in the 1870s, followed by powerful marketing campaigns, saw the likes of emeralds and rubies usurped by diamonds as the supposed ultimate symbol of beauty, love and wealth.

A GROWING APPRECIATION

The past decade, however, has seen a resurgence in the popularity of coloured gemstones. Take a look at the jewellery of British royalty: the Duchess of Cambridge's deep blue sapphire engagement ring; Meghan Markle's aquamarine ring; Princess Eugenie's coral Padparadscha sapphire ring and Boucheron emerald Kokoshnik tiara. Each has sparked countless imitations and inspired thousands to look beyond the traditional diamond. Gilbertson confirms a markedly growing demand in the sector. "The swing toward precious coloured gemstones is overwhelming, with robust demand prompting double-digit growth in many countries. The past decade has seen the world record prices for an emerald and a ruby surpass that of a colourless diamond on a per carat basis. It surely can't be long before sapphires overtake diamonds, too."

Josina von dem Bussche-Kessel, global sales director at Fabergé, names two segments performing particularly well in the coloured gemstone market: "Bespoke, custom-designed coloured gemstone jewellery pieces and everyday coloured gemstone designs"

PROFESSIONAL JEWELLER – 17 JUNE, 2019

PROFESSIONAL JEWELLER

Much of the rising popularity of coloured gemstones is due to growing awareness (primarily via the internet and marketing) and developments that have boosted consumer confidence, such as widespread certification, more industry transparency, and gemmological analysis.

The discovery of new gemstone deposits in the likes of Mozambique and Zambia has seen a reliable supply of fine gemstones enter the market, spurring an increase in marketing. The power of this should not be underestimated. In 1948, De Beers coined its 'a diamond is forever' slogan to invent the modern day engagement ring; in 2000, Le Vian saw sales rocket after rebranding previously dismissed brown diamonds as 'chocolate' diamonds.

Stephan Reif, director of the International Colored Gemstone Association, attributes this increase in marketing coloured gemstones as a result of the "many opportunities [they offer] to create unique product lines at attractive margins". Hardy, however, attributes it to a more sentimental reason. "Colour speaks to people," she says. "Gemstones are unique and allow people to have their own preference and identity."

A comprehensive understanding is imperative to finding the right gem, too. Unlike diamonds, for example, where clarity is a crucial criterion, inclusions in coloured gemstones are accepted as these give each stone their unique character.

The latter is crucial, says Jean Ghika, global head of jewellery at Bonhams. "The rarity factor is an undeniable pull," she says. "Potential buyers are looking to expand their collections beyond colourless diamonds. They're keen to seek out the very best examples of highly desirable and rare specimens, whether that be Kashmir sapphires, Burma rubies or no-oil emeralds, the likes of which they may never find again."

The consideration of geography is important not only in terms of where the gemstones are being mined, but also in where the demand is coming from. "Fabergé is seeing increased demand from Asia in particular for rubies," says von dem Bussche-Kessell. "There, the colour red represents good luck, fortune and mystery."

PRICE JUMPS

As global demand increases, so too does price. Over the past decade, coloured gemstones have experienced some of the biggest price jumps in history. In 2015, the world's most expensive ruby sold at auction: a 25.59-carat gem, known as the Sunrise Ruby, for $30m.

Since 2009, Gemfields has held 41 auctions – 30 of Zambian emeralds and 11 of Mozambican rubies – and has now surpassed US$1bn in combined auction revenue, an achievement described by Gilbertson as "a remarkable benchmark that would have been unthinkable a decade ago".

Yet while the extraordinary quality 'big three' – emeralds, rubies and sapphires – are affordable only for a very few, high quality examples of each from newer deposits are currently far more accessible than those from more established origins.

INTO THE FUTURE

So, what's next for the world of coloured gemstones? Could their growing popularity see them eventually replace diamonds as the ultimate gem for declaring one's love?

Von dem Bussche-Kessell's outlook is positive. "Overall, colour is more of a staple than ever before," she says. "We're seeing clients be much more adventurous in their choices and a desire to look beyond diamonds."

Gilbertson agrees, and believes there will be a growing emphasis on where gemstones come from. "We expect vibrant consumer interest and sector growth to continue," he says. "Responsible sourcing will receive ever-increasing attention and become progressively more important to consumers, making gemstone provenance perhaps the key driving factor."

Each of the experts I speak with has their own fascinating insight into the world of coloured gemstones, but there's one thing on which they all firmly agree: synthetic stones won't ever replace their natural counterparts. As Reif so succinctly puts it: "No technology could replace the magic and fascination of natural coloured gemstones."

Investments in coloured gemstones has been “overwhelming” this year, new report finds

◇ DIAMONDS & GEMSTONES / NEWS by STACEY HAILES on 17TH JUNE 2019

Findings from the Knight Frank Luxury Investment Index (KFLII) have been unveiled, highlighting the growing significance of coloured gemstones.

While jewellery as a whole has had a tough 12 months, decreasing in value by 5%, specific areas of the market have experienced a growth in value.

Unusually, after a decade of very strong growth, pearl jewellery experienced a 13% fall over the past year, while other areas of the market performed stronger than ever. For example, Belle Epoque and Art Deco jewellery saw 9% growth, while post-war jewellery was up 7%.

Moreover, the report states coloured gemstones have outperformed the wider jewellery market – so much so a special issue of the Luxury Investment Index has been dedicated to the performance of these stones

Andrew Shirley, head of luxury research at Knight Frank, shares: “While diamonds may be a girl’s best friend, it is emeralds, rubies and sapphires that somehow seem more exotic, redolent of the tropical parts of the world where they are extracted from the earth’s clutches.

“The interesting story here is that coloured gemstones are outperforming the wider jewellery market with some significant sales taking place already in 2019.”

At Bonhams’ London sale at the end of April 2019, several coloured gemstone lots blew away their estimates. The top performer was a 17.43-carat Kashmir sapphire ring, formerly owned by a European noble family that fetched £723,063, far exceeding its £300,000 to £400,000 guide price.

The second highest performing lot was a diamond and sapphire transformable necklace by Spanish jeweller, Grassy. Dated to around 1935 and featuring a 34.59-carat Sri Lankan (no heat) sapphire, the necklace sold for £287,562 against its pre-sale estimate of £120,000 to £180,000.

Gemfields chief executive officer, Sean Gilbertson, remarks in the report: “The swing towards precious coloured gemstones is overwhelming. The past decade has seen the world record prices for an emerald and ruby surpass that of a colourless diamond on a per carat basis. It surely can’t be long before sapphires overtake diamonds, too.

“We expect vibrant consumer interest and sector growth to continue. Responsible sourcing will receive ever-increasing attention and become progressively more important to consumers, making gemstone provenance perhaps the key driving factor.”

Rare whisky continues to lead the Knight Frank Luxury Investment Index by some margin at the end of Q1 2019. No other asset class comes close to the 12-month (35%) or ten-year (563%) growth of the Knight Frank Rare Whisky Index despite the value of whisky falling slightly in the first three months of the year due to oversupply in the market.

Being owned by mining giant Gemfields, the venerable house of Fabergé has nowadays access to the most ravishing Zambian emeralds and rubies from Mozambique. But of course, it is not just about having the best gemstones on hand, it is also about what you can do with them. Benefiting from a prestigious heritage, Fabergé has succeeded in bridging past and present; all contemporary creations are firmly modern in design, yet the most ornamental ones hark back to the house's core embrace of fantasy, as seen in the Foliage earrings. They are straight out of a wonderland jungle, an ode to its verdant lushness. The composition has also benefited from a two tone colouristic approach (white and green), so as not to distract from the clarity of the main stones. The bottom pear-shaped drop emeralds are also detachable so one can have the earrings just embracing the ear contour, for a more 'discreet' look, though it would be difficult to go unnoticed with these floral pieces on, with or without the drop.

Foliage Earrings in 18K white gold set with 259 emeralds (4.10cts), round white diamonds (0.92ct), 2 pear-shaped emeralds (13.58cts), 2 oval emeralds (2.30cts), 2 round emeralds (0.62ct), 2 oval emeralds (2.23cts), 4 marquise-cut emeralds (3.46cts) 2 round emeralds (0.59ct) 4 pear-shaped emeralds (5.46cts) (all emeralds are GPL certified, Gemfields Emeralds). 哈洛佩戴的The Secret Garden高级珠宝系列，每件都洋溢着对艺术的赞颂。该系列珠宝搭配理查德·奎因(Richard Quinn)新艺术风格的定制女装。这款女装从大自然中汲取设计灵感，采用手工刺绣图案。

法贝热The Secret Garden系列手镯

法贝热The Secret Garden系列设计灵感源自创始人彼得·卡尔·法贝热(Peter Carl Fabergé)对鲜花的热情以及俄罗斯艺术家马克·夏加尔(Marc Chagall)创作的活泼可爱的花朵。该系列展现了缤纷的花草盛世时的绚丽之美。通过将精心雕刻的钻石、祖母绿和黄金等珠宝进行巧妙地混搭，这些有着不同材质的高品质宝石交相辉映，从而凸显出

一种迷人的和谐。这些宝石包括鲜艳色的祖母绿、艳丽的绿蓝宝石以及水晶红宝石，周边是色彩鲜亮的粉红色尖晶石、薄荷色电气石、帕拉伊巴石、月光石和绿帘石。

比钻戒性价比更高？王室和明星都败了这样的婚戒新宠

[珠宝之家 婚嫁珠宝] 婚礼对一个女人一生来说真的太重要了！毕竟，谁都不想错过一实现公主梦的机会。不过，当今的新娘子可不再像从前那么好哄了，只让“贪心”的她们老老实实地当一天公主可远远不够，从婚礼现场的布置、婚嫁产品的选择、婚后对财政大权的掌管来看，她们都要亲自操刀，以便坐稳后位！也难怪连钻石这种永恒的象征也入不了她们的眼，除了经典之外，如何能够更加精准地表达个性已经成为准新娘们追逐的一大潮流，刚好，彩色宝石订婚戒指十分对味。比钻石的性价比更高不说，加上王室和明星的带货，已经有越来越多的新娘爱上了色彩更加丰富的彩色宝石。

FABERGÉ CELEBRATES FATHER'S DAY

🕒 JUNE 10, 2019 📍 UAENEWS247 💬 LEAVE A COMMENT

Father's Day is an important celebration for Fabergé. Peter Carl Fabergé inherited his father's jewellery shop from where he built his legendary artist jeweller empire and so, this Father's Day, Fabergé honour not only that special gift, but pay tribute to their reputation for elegance and innovation with a collection of the finest cufflinks and timepieces any father could hope to own.

Timepieces have always been at the heart of Fabergé's story. In many families, they are handed down from father to son, a lifelong heirloom which becomes a legacy.

Peter Carl designed exquisite clocks and found ingenious ways of incorporating movements into his rich repertoire of objects d'art. Today, Fabergé presents contemporary versions of these original pieces, including the Visionnaire DTZ Gold - with its award winning movement and brushed gold and titanium case; the Visionnaire Chronograph Ceramic - with its ceramic and titanium case topped by a domed sapphire crystal, and the Altruist 18 Karat Rose Gold - with a guilloché dial and blue steel hands fitting as perfectly on the wrist as they do in Fabergé's history.

The relationship between the Tsar's Imperial Court and the House of Fabergé first started when Fabergé exhibited in the 1882 Moscow Pan-Russian Exhibition and the Empress Maria Fedorovna purchased a pair of cufflinks - the first ever Fabergé purchase by the Imperial Family.

July Birthstone: The Best Ruby Jewellery To Gift Your Loved Ones

As we move into July, we celebrate the birthstone of the month with the help of global emerald and ruby gemstone suppliers Gemfields.

The natural, Bhutanese, is known for its vibrant, earthy appeal to gemstone collectors. With its rich, deep red hue, it is a popular choice for jewelry. The 2017 Nobel Prize in Chemistry was awarded to the discoverer of the natural, Bhutanese, gemstone. Finding a gift that's both luxurious and personal can be tricky. So if you have a loved one celebrating an important birthday this month, why not treat them to a pair of earrings encrusted with rubies, the birthstone for the month of July.

The concept of birthstones is an ancient one and stems from previous civilizations' beliefs that gems and crystals hold unique and particular powers. Rubies have been known as the jewel of passion, love, power and new energy for life - making it a thoughtful present for those born in the summer month. Hundreds of millions of years in the making, rubies are extremely rare and often cited as the most luxurious of all the gemstones with a very unique formation process.

Jewellery houses such as Fabergé and Bvlgari have created intricate and resplendent rings, earrings, and necklaces using the precious stone. The first of which was founded in 1842 in Saint Petersburg, Russia, by Gustav Fabergé and was once famous for designing elaborate jewelled Easter eggs for the Russian Tsar. Later, his grandsons moved the house to Paris.
